

Monique Fragua
COO, Indian Pueblo Cultural Center

From the banks of the Jemez River to the boardroom of a large organization, Monique Fragua is a portrait of Pueblo women's strength, determination, and love of community. She is the first woman to accept a presidency role at the Indian Pueblo Cultural Center (IPCC) and Indian Pueblos Marketing, Inc. (IPMI). As the former Vice President of Commercial Enterprises, Monique made it her personal mission to employ people from Native communities and provide them with the training and resources to advance their individual skills, so they impact their communities through enhanced abilities to lead, by speaking up when needed, and making changes to benefit those around them.

Recently promoted to COO of Commercial Enterprises, Ms. Fragua's maintains oversight of the operational efforts for Indian Pueblo Marketing Inc.'s food and beverage, retail, accommodations and storage businesses on the IPCC Campus.
